Appointment of a New Executive Director for The Mulberry Centre

After a full recruitment process, the trustees of The Mulberry Centre are delighted to announce the appointment of Raj Athwal, who is currently the Director of the Henna Asian Women's Group, which is based in and around Camden. She has been there for ten years and has been the lead person in the growth of the group and its networks. She is looking to join the Centre formally on the 5 March but will have involvement with us before then.

Sarah Thewlis, the Chair of Trustees said:

"We were pleased by the level of interest shown in the role, and we are delighted that Raj has accepted the role. The interview panels were highly impressed by her commitment, her energy, her approach and her fundraising skills. Together with the rest of the trustees, I am very much looking forward to working with her. She brings much skill and experience, and I have no doubt that she will build positive relationships both in the Centre and with our many stakeholders."

Raj Athwal, the new Executive Director said:

"I'm super excited and honoured to be appointed as the Executive Director for The Mulberry Centre to work on its hugely successful practical and emotional support for anyone affected by cancer. I am eager to be part of The Mulberry Centre where we ensure that all people impacted by cancer are empowered by knowledge, strengthened by action and given the opportunity to improve the lives of those touched by cancer and ensuring no one has to face it alone. I look forward to building on the incredible work undertaken by the team and leading The Mulberry Centre through its 20th year and beyond."

About The Mulberry Centre

The mission is to provide support and information for anyone affected by cancer, offering practical ways of enhancing physical, psychological and emotional well-being. In the last year a total of nearly 800 unique individuals were provided with a care and support programme based on their own specific needs.
